Are solar panels a scam?

Solar panels themselves are not a scam. When the sun shines on solar panels, they produce electricity that can be used to power appliances and devices in your home. Making your own solar energy this way saves you money on your utility bills. That's not to say solar panel scams aren't real--just that the technology itself is not the problem.

How do I avoid getting scammed with solar panels?

To avoid getting scammed, you need to know what to look out for and when to walk away. Here's our guide to spotting solar panel scams and finding a great installer. If something you see or hear from a salesperson sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

How do I report a solar panel scam?

If you suspect you've fallen victim to a solar panel scam, report it to the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) and your state's consumer protection agency. You should also file a complaint with the Better Business Bureau (BBB) and inform your family and friends.

What happens if a solar company goes out of business?

The current solar companies (without naming names) that advertise only use one brand and if that solar panel company goes out of business, the home owner is stuck! Many of these solar companies have sales people who scam the homeowner by saying the panels will save energy.
